

WWII JAPANESE 1,000 STITCH BELT, NCO'S IDENTITY CARD AND RANK INSIGNIA

The 1,000 stitch belt given to soldiers when going away to fight for the Emperor, commonly known as the Senninbari measuring 83cm in length 30cm deep. Very nicely stitched with the red Japanese sun to the middle with kanji characters below and above.

Complete with what appears to be a Japanese identity card for military service with a photograph of the Japanese Sergeant or Sergeant Major to the interior. Also two other items of paperwork.

Additionally the following unissued and mounted bevo type rank insignia:

Private 1st Class; pair, not separated

Private 2nd Class; pair, separated

Superior Private; single

Condition, generally very good and better
